

ABSTRACT

Edible films incorporated carrageenan in conjunction with insoluble and inert carbohydrate components, such as high-amylose starch, have been found to exhibit superior properties as material for meat casings, including high strength and excellent adhesion to the meat. Liquid compositions for casting into such edible films are disclosed which facilitate the efficient production of sausage and other film-encased meat products using conventional forming apparatus.